

Monday, June 29, 2009

The kids are really sad that this is the last day together. Today we spent the last morning playing games and connecting with the Navajo kids as well as letting the ones feeling under the weather rest. This afternoon we were able to do some swimming. Man, is the cement hot! It was so great to see the kids one last time connect like there was no difference between NM and PA kids. It truly was one big group. Tonight we had a testimony time where the kids had a chance to share what they liked, learned and changed in them because of this trip. Hope to hear more in our travel day tomorrow. Please pray for safe travel to ABQ.