

Dr. Ken Miller

1. What answers can we give to the question, "Who are you?"

Most obvious: _____

Need more info? How about _____,

_____, _____, _____,

_____, _____?

Answers to the question are indicators of

_____ and _____, something everyone wants and needs.

Can our answers provide satisfaction?

2. Paul speaks to people whose identity is _____, guaranteed by _____.

It has significance because it is above . . .

"Who Do You Think You Are, Anyway?"

April 26, 2009

It has value because it is . . .

_____ and _____; it carries the promise of _____.

3. For those included, God has changed our _____ and wants to change our _____. He wants us to live lives which . . .

_____ in all circumstances.